Pam Evans is an educational technology consultant specializing in technology integration, BYOD implementations, mobile learning devices, and interactive whiteboard technologies. She retired with over 30 years experience as a classroom teacher, instructional technologist, and technology director in Texas public schools. She has presented at state and local conferences and school districts in Alabama, Indiana, Mississippi, and Texas.

Pam served as Area 6 Director for the Texas Computer Education Association Board of Directors for two terms, where she led a committee in rewriting the organization's bylaws. She also held the office of president while being on the board of directors of the Caldwell Cemetery Association. She now serves at Vice President of the Caldwell ISD Board of Trustees.

Her passion is technology and helping educators use strategies to successfully integrate technology in their classroom. She and her husband, Jerry share a love for camping at various lakes and hiking the mountains and blacklands of South Dakota with their four-year-old Yorkie, Winston. Together, they have two daughters and son-in-laws
